

RADII Intake Form

Thanks for your interest in contributing to RADII!

If you haven't already, please visit radiichina.com and familiarize yourself with our tone and content. RADII aims to build bridges of cultural understanding between China and the West and reshape the narrative by telling engaging stories about contemporary Chinese society to a young (late teens-early 30s) North American audience – people who may know little about China outside of mainstream media headlines.

Our stories generally fall into one of three categories: CULTURE (art, music, film, literature), INNOVATION ("tech," broadly defined), and LIFE (health, wellbeing, traditional Chinese medicine, and food/drink). Our style has substance for even a seasoned "China hand," but is at the same time light and humorous, sometimes irreverent, but always engaging and memorable in tone.

WE DO: aim to create a diverse mosaic of today's China with an accessible, young and stylish aesthetic

WE DON'T: publish old, tired stereotypes that reinforce outdated notions of China

If you think you have a story to tell that will fit with RADII, please let us know the following:

Name *

Age

Where are you from / where have you called home?

What is your connection to China?

In which category would your story fit?

Culture

Innovation

Life

Summarize your story in one sentence:

Tell us the broad strokes in 3-5 sentences

What format will your contribution take?

Who will you interview for this story (if anyone)?

If a text article, what visuals could we include with your story (photos, gifs, videos, etc)?

When could you have this story ready to post?

Can you link us to 2-3 of your previous pieces (if any)?

Anything else?
